

Yolande van der Veer

Van der Veer Bv

The Netherlands

Food for Thought in Talent Development Reinforcing and Learning from Each Other Companies need talented young people to innovate, to answer issues in a quickly paced and changing society. But how to attract this talent, how to develop them and how to retain them? What should universities do in order to answer these questions? For one, it is evidently more than only doing research in an ivory tower. We need people that know how to work together, people that know what their qualities and talents are and how to develop them. Companies have the necessary know-how and provide a better environment than academia. I will show you what there is to learn from each other. What can you do yourself, take your chances in this creative think-tank!